We specialize in insurance for businesses. Is it enough for you?

There are three main kinds of insurance that we offer here at Hastings Mutual: Commercial (aka business), Personal (home and auto), and Farm. We call them lines of business. If you look through our website or talk with our local independent insurance agent partners, you'll see that providing reliable, effective coverage for all three of those lines is important to us — as important as developing a relationship with you is.

You've read about all three lines here on the Mutual Understanding blog (here's a post on our multi-policy discount for personal lines and here's one on growing hops that goes along with Farmowners coverage).

I've written several posts on commercial/business topics — recently this one on veterinarian coverage — and in fact commercial business is about half of everything we do.

We're active in a lot of different industries. A major one is contractors, where we offer several types of coverage. There's also metalists, churches, and others.

At the same time, we talk about risk: not just physical risk from an injury on the job but also dangers to your computer network. We're working to give you helpful information from beginning to end of the insurance process.

What would you like to see from Hastings Mutual? We want to provide valuable information to you throughout the insurance process, from your first online search for coverage to the day you sign for your new policy protecting your business from the many risks you take every day to be successful.

Let me know in the comments — what can we do to make Hastings Mutual better for you?
